SHOVEL OPERATOR LUKAS TRAUDE ENJOYS THE BUSY NATURE OF HIS WORK AT THE EAGLE GOLD MINE, where he started with Victoria Gold this past March, loading 785D haul trucks with ore for delivery to the mine's Primary Crusher. "Having to think and plan ahead as the task requires is rewarding," says Lukas. "And the Yukon scenery in 'my office' is nothing short of epic."

Yukoner Ryan Komaromi also started with Victoria at the mine in March. A driller for over a decade, he maintains the drills at site and drills patterns for hand off to the blast crew. "I enjoy working in a safe and efficient manner," says Ryan. "I love the freedom the Yukon provides to me and my family and I am proud to be working right here at home."

Haul truck operator Desiree Couture is yet another Yukoner working at the Eagle Gold Mine. One of the 118 Yukon residents who have been employed at site during the mine's construction phase, and now operations, as Victoria Gold conducted its first gold pour at site on September 17. "I love all the opportunities my work gives me to learn new things," says Desiree.

Fellow haul truck operator Charles Demers is new to the Eagle Gold Mine team, having started with Victoria Gold last month. "Like Lukas, I love the view out my office window," jokes Charles.

Heavy equipment operator Cody Smith enjoys working with the "great crew" at the mine. "I love helping where help is needed at site," says Cody, a Yukon resident.

Victoria Gold is proud of all its employees and considers their health, wellbeing and safety as paramount. The company reached another major safety milestone in August and now has more than 1.7 million labour hours without a lost time incident (LTI).
